TRIAL OF THE PRESIDENT.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The Argument of Mr. Stanbery—His Exhaustion from Illness—Portion of his Argument Read by his Secretary—His Closing Peroration, &c.

[Reported for the Baltimore Sun.]

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The court of impeachment was opened with the usual formalities.

The Chief Justice notified Mr. Stanbery to proceed.

CONCLUSION OF MR. STANBERY'S ARGUMENT.

Mr. Stanbery said that first of all he must return his thanks to the Senate for their kindness yesterday. He was much refreshed by his rest, and thought he would be able to get through.

Before he entered upon this case he must speak in advance, not that he hoped to carry anything before a body like this by any expression of confidence, but he had examined this matter from beginning, and there was not only not a case made out, but not a shadow of a case.

Mr. Stanbery's argument then proceeded substantially as follows, from the point where he left off yesterday, departing occasionally from the text of the prepared speech:

But if Senators should be of opinion that the tenure-of-office act protected Mr. Stanton, and that the attempt to remove him was equivalent to a removal, he (Mr. Stanbery) would next maintain, first, that the President had a right to construe the law for himself; and if, in the exercise of that right, he committed an error of construction, and acted under that error, he is not to be held responsible. Second, if he had so construed the law as to be of opinion that Mr. Stanton was intended to be protected by it against his power of removal, and was also of opinion that the law in that respect was contrary to the constitution, he is not to be held responsible if he therein committed an error.

Mr. Stanbery proceeded to argue these points in the order in which they were stated. With regard to the first point, he agreed that ignorance or misconception of the law does not in general excuse a party from civil or criminal liability; but he contended that there were exceptions, and that this case fell within one of the exceptions. Where a law is passed which concerns the President and touches his official duties, it is not only his right but his duty to determine for himself what is the true construction of the law, and to act or refuse to act according to that determination, whatever it may be. He is invested with a discretion which is not allowed to a ministerial officer. The President is not merely a ministerial officer. It is his function to construe laws as well as to execute them. The constitution does not vest him with judicial power, but it does invest him with a discretion as to the mode of executing laws.

In support of this point Mr. Stanbery cited the opinion of Chief Justice Chase, delivered in the Supreme Court in April, 1867, upon what was called the Mississippi injunction case. Mr. S. then argued that when this tenure-of-office act came to be considered by the President in reference to his purpose to remove Mr. Stanton from office, he had a right and it was his duty to decide for himself whether the proposed removal of Mr. Stanton was or was not forbidden by the act. The act had as yet received no construction by the judicial department, and the President could not settle his doubts, if he entertained any, by asking any other opinions than those of the heads of departments.

With regard to the second point, Mr. Stanbery said it appeared that the President's opinion upon this question was made up deliberately. When the law was on its passage, and had been presented to him for approval, his opinion was formed that it was in violation of the constitution. He refused to approve it, and returned it to Congress with a message in which this opinion was distinctly announced. The exercise of that veto power exhausted all his means of resistance to what he deemed an unconstitutional act in his legislative capacity. But this law was directly aimed at him and at the executive power. When, therefore, he came a second time to consider it, it was in the discharge of an executive duty. Had he then no discretion? Was he then bound to act in an altogether ministerial capacity? Having once finally exercised a discretion in his legislative capacity, to prevent the passage of the law, was he thereby deprived of his discretion in his executive capacity when he was called upon to act under it?

At a quarter before one o'clock, Mr. Stanbery, showing evident signs of fatigue,

Mr. Johnson approached him and made, apparently, a suggestion, in reply to which he said it would relieve him very much if his young friend could be permitted to read his remarks.

Mr. Anthony said, in order to relieve the counsel, he would move that the Senate adjourn until Monday.

Several Senators: No, no!

In reply to an inquiry from the Chief Justice, Mr. Stanbery said he did not ask it, and Senator Anthony withdrew the motion.

Mr. [illegible] T. Poliddek, formerly of the Attorney General's office, and who has attended the counsel during the trial, then proceeded to read from the printed speech in a loud and clear voice, and with good emphasis, as follows:

He (Mr. Stanbery) knew it had been said that a law passed over the President's veto by the constitutional two-thirds has a greater sanction than a law passed in the ordinary way, but this is a modern heresy, unsustained by any reason or authority. It stands upon an equal footing with other legislative acts, and cannot be put upon higher or lower ground. The question then recurs, is the President invested with a discretion in his executive capacity? Mr. Stanbery contended that he is, and in support of that assumption he quoted from Jefferson, Jackson and Van Buren upon this point. He then cited various authorities upon the point that a law passed by Congress in violation of the constitution is totally void, and as to the discretion vested in the President to decide for himself the question of the validity of such a law.

Mr. Stanbery then proceeded to call attention to the other articles, and first the conspiracy articles, which he said all relate to the same subject-matter, the war office, the Secretary of the War office, and the public property therein. And this is all that is necessary to be said about these articles, for not a scintilla of proof has been adduced in their support. Next as to the 9th article usually known as the Emory article. This had no substance in itself from the beginning, and since the testimony of Mr. Welles remains without the slightest foundation. Next as to the 10th article, relative to the speeches made at the Executive mansion, at Cleveland and at St. Louis. It is in the name of all the people of the United States that Senators are in this article called upon to hold the President of the United States guilty for speaking, as the article has it, with a loud voice to assemblages of American citizens what is called scandalous matter touching the 39th Congress of the United States.

In the first place, that political body did not deem it necessary to guard its own honor and privileges by taking notice of charges so made against themselves. Every word charged had been brought to their notice, but they deliberately declined to interfere, and so the slander, if slander it was, spoken, and the object against which it was spoken, have all passed away, and a new Congress finds it necessary to vindicate the honor of its defunct predecessor by doing that which its predecessor refused to do for itself. It passes comprehension that such an article as this should be gravely presented in the name of the American people. If there is any one precious right which our people value as a jewel beyond price, it is the right of free speech, with the corresponding right of a free press. Muzzle the one or gag the other, and we are back again to the times when there was no such body in the States as the people. Mr. Stanbery then referred at length to the jealousy with which the people of Great Britain had guarded this right. He quoted the constitution upon the subject, and referred to the odium that attached to the sedition laws of July 14, 1798.

With regard to the 11th article, Mr. Stanbery confessed his inability to make anything out of it, and he did not feel justified in taking up the time of the Senate in the consideration of this anomalous article.

And now, after this review of the articles, Mr. Stanbery asked where was the mischief, or where was the injury to any individual or any officer of the government, brought about by the action of the President? To all this, it is said, that it is enough that the law has been violated; that powers have been assumed by the President not conferred upon him by the constitution of the United States. It is in the order of February 21st, 1868, that it is claimed that the President usurped a power not granted by the constitution; but he (Mr. Stanbery) maintained that the order issued on the 21st of February was issued by the President in the exercise of an undoubted power vested in him by the constitution of the United States. So far as this question stands upon authority, it may be said to be more thoroughly and satisfactorily settled than any one that has at any time agitated this country.

Mr. Stanbery then argued upon the constitutional power to make removals, and insisted that he was only exercising that constitutional power when he removed Mr. Stanton. If it is a constitutional power which he possesses, how can it be taken away by any mode short of a constitutional amendment? Neither in the primitive clauses of the second section of the military appropriation act nor in the sixth section of the tenure-of-office act is the President of the United States so much as mentioned. Whoever drew these acts shrunk from referring to the office by name, but there is no question that it is the President and President alone that is meant. The law was made for him; the punishment was made for him. He is left no choice—no chance of appeal to the courts. The language of the law to him in effect is, this or the penitentiary. Do our bidding or take the consequences of impeachment. And now how do all these high-sounding phrases importing high crimes and misdemeanors in the acts referred to compare with the actual character of the acts called high crimes and misdemeanors in the text of the constitution?

The language of the constitution is too plain to be misunderstood. The President is to be impeached only "on conviction of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors." What do the words "other high crimes and misdemeanors" mean? Why, such as are assimilated to those that are enumerated, not all crimes and misdemeanors, but such as are of a similar character with those enumerated; and which are impeachment from the first showed few signs of vitality. It has been nursed by the managers with the greatest care, especially by that honorable manager (Mr. Butler) whose business it was first to bring it to the notice of the Senate. He dandled the bantling in his arms with consummate skill. He pinched its poor, wan cheeks for some show of life, but even then it was too evident that it was in articulo mortis. The nurse was skillful, but the subject, with all his care, was beyond his art. Long since this show of vitality vanished, and now it lies bereft of life, a shapeless mass, which gives no sign, scarcely a grim contortion, under the galvanic touch of high party excitement.

With regard to the argument of the managers that the ad interim authority given to General Thomas was in violation of law, outside of the tenure-of-office act, Mr. Stanbery combatted the positions assumed, and denied any violation or impeachable offence, and referred to the legislation of 1792, 1795 and 1863, which gives the President the power to fill vacancies. The law of 1863 repealed no prior law, and consequently the President's act was not inconsistent with the law of 1795.

With regard to the testimony in the case, Mr. Stanbery argued that there was none to warrant conviction. He asked Senators to remember the testimony of Gen. Thomas, Gen. Sherman, Mr. Cox and Mr. Merrick, and see throughout the purpose of the President, declared at all times, from first to last, to bring this question to judicial arbitrament.

At this point the reading was suspended, and Mr. Stanbery resumed the floor and delivered the following impressive and eloquent peroration:

Senators, it was not at all necessary for the defense of the President that in the exercise of that discretion which the law allows to him he should be put to prove that his intentions were all right. He has gone far beyond the necessities of his case. Never were good intentions and honest motives more thoroughly proved than they have been proved in this case. I repeat it, that if everything else were made out, this great exculpatory fact must absolve him from all criminal liability. And, now, Senators, I have done with the law and the facts of the case. There remains for me, however, a duty to perform—one of solemn import and obligation—a duty to my client, to my former chief, to my friend.

There may be those among you, Senators, who cannot find a case of guilt against the President; there may be those among you who are not satisfied that a case for impeachment has yet arisen, but are fearful of the consequences of an acquittal. You may entertain vague apprehensions that, flushed with the success of an acquittal, the President will proceed to acts of violence and revolution. Senators, you do not know or understand the man. I cannot say that you willfully misunderstand him; for I, too, though never an extreme party man, have felt more than once in the heat of party conflicts the same bitter and uncompromising spirit that may now animate you. The time has been when I looked upon General Jackson as the most dangerous of tyrants. Time has been when, day after day, I expected to see him inaugurate a revolution, and yet, after his administration was crowned with success and sustained by the people, I lived to see him gracefully surrender his great powers to the hands that conferred them, and under the softening influences of time I came to regard him not as a tyrant, but as one of the most honest and patriotic men.

Now listen for a moment to one who understands Andrew Johnson better than most of you, for his opportunities have been greater. When, nearly two years ago, he called me from the pursuits of my professional life to take a seat in his cabinet, I answered the call under a sense of public duty. I came here almost a stranger to him and to every member of the cabinet except Mr. Stanton. We had been friends for many years. Senators, need I tell you that all my tendencies are conservative? You, Mr. Chief Justice, who have known me for a third of a century, can bear me witness, law, not arms, is my profession. From the moment that I was honored with a seat in the cabinet of Mr. Johnson, not a step was taken that did not come under my observation, not a word was said that escaped my attention. I regarded him closely in cabinet, and still more in private and confidential conversation. I saw him often tempted with bad advice. I knew that evil counsellors were more than once around him. I observed him with the most intense anxiety, but never in word, in deed, in thought, in action, did I discover in that man anything but loyalty to the constitution and the laws. He stood firm as a rock against all temptation to abuse his own powers or to exercise those which were not conferred upon him.—Steadfast and self-reliant in the midst of all difficulty, when dangers threatened, when temptations were strong, he looked only to the constitution of his country and to the people.

Yes, Senators, I have seen that man tried as few have been tried. I have seen his confidence abused. I have seen him endure day after day privations such as few men have ever been called upon to meet. No man could have met them with more sublime patience. Sooner or later, however, I knew the explosion must come. And when it did come, my only wonder was that it had been so long delayed. Yes, Senators, with all his faults, the President has been more sinned against than sinning. Fear not, then, to acquit him. The constitution of the country is as safe in his hands from violence as it was in the hands of Washington. But if, Senators, you condemn him; if you strip him of the robes of office; if you degrade him to the utmost stretch of you power, mark the prophecy: The strong arms of the people will be about him. They will find a way to raise him from any depths to which you may consign him, and we shall live to see him redeemed, and to hear the majestic voice of the people: Well done faithful servant, you shall have your reward.

But, if Senators, as I cannot believe, but has been boldly said with almost official sanction, your votes have been canvassed and the doom of the President sealed, then let that judgment not be pronounced in this Senate chamber, just here where our Camillus, in the hour of our greatest peril, single-handed, met and baffled the enemies of the republic; not here where he stood faithful among the faithless; not here where he fought the good fight for the Union and the constitution; not in this chamber, whose walls echo with that clarion voice that in the days of our greatest danger carried hope and comfort to many a desponding heart, strong as an army with banners. No, not here; seek out rather the darkest and gloomiest chamber in the subterranean recesses of the capitol, where the cheerful light of day never enters. There erect the altar and immolate the victim.

The court then adjourned until Monday.

THE WESTERN MARYLAND RAILROAD BONDS AND THE CITY REGISTER.

In investigating the charges of corruption against three members of the first branch of the city council, whom the large majority of that body have voted to expel, for having demanded and received pay in connection with the passage of the resolution for the further endorsement of the Western Maryland railroad bonds, the joint committee of the council took the testimony (or statement rather, as it was not under oath) of John Lee Chapman, Esq., late president of that road, among others. The committee has so far refrained from making public the testimony in the case, but Mr. Chapman has furnished for publication a copy substantially, as he says, of his statements to the committee, in which he implicates Mr. John H. Barnes, the city register, as well as the members of council declared expelled. The following is the chief portion of

MR. CHAPMAN'S STATEMENT:

On our return from the examination of the road I was informed that the endorsed bonds would not be placed in my hands to pay the contractors. On hearing this, I sought an interview with Register Barnes, and became convinced that the bonds would not be delivered to me as president of the road. However, a few days afterwards a gentleman called upon me, who, I had previously been informed, was engaged with Register Barnes in shaving city securities of every character. He offered to take the entire $50,000 at 85 cents. Without giving him any answer I called upon Messrs. Marshall and Fisher, the counsel of the company, and informed them of these facts, and stated my belief also that unless I agreed to sell them at 85 cents to this party, that they would not be issued by the city register. Mr. Marshall endeavored to persuade me from this conclusion, saying that the register would not presume to retain the bonds.

The contractors, some twenty in number, (for the road was given out in mile sections,) being assured that the examination by the mayor and committee had proved entirely satisfactory, had come to the city to obtain from me the payment of the amounts due them on their contracts, and were very urgent in their demands for the money. The bonds had been signed by the treasurer and president of the road, and placed in the hands of the register for the endorsement of the city. I had called for them day after day, and had been informed that they were not ready. At each of these visits Register Barnes offered me eighty-five cents on the dollar for them. I informed him repeatedly that I had been offered more than eighty-five for them, and that they were selling at ninety cents at the stock board. He replied that he understood the bids at the stock board; that they were what is termed "whitewashing." I then informed him that Mr. Fisher, stock broker, had offered me eighty-six for them; but he persisted in holding them and to give me $85 on the $100 for them. I then informed Mr. Fisher that I was satisfied that I would not be able to get the bonds from the register unless I agreed to sell them at eighty-five, which I would be compelled to do, as the contractors were pressing me for their money. Mr. Fisher advised me not to submit to this imposition.

Before concluding what I would do I called upon Messrs. Marshall and Fisher, the counsel of the company, and informed them that I had been kept in suspense for weeks by Register Barnes, and that the contractors were daily begging me for their money, and that I would be compelled to take the eighty-five cents offered by him, although Mr. Fisher, the broker, had offered me eighty-six. I also told them that, although the council had ordered $50,000 to be issued by the register, that he had refused to issue more than $20,000, and that I could not get even this amount without selling it to the register at eighty-five.

informed him that it was the positive order of Mayor Banks that only $20,000 should be issued and that $30,000 must be retained as a sinking fund.

I then called upon the register and informed him that 85 on the $20,000 would be of no use to me, as it would not pay the contractors, and said that if he would give me 85 on the $50,000 I would take it. He at once agreed to take the $50,000 at 85 without seeing the mayor, and in entire disregard of the order he had represented Mayor Banks as having given him. He then told me to call next day and when I called he only gave me 85 on the $20,000. I remonstrated, but to no purpose, and finally took the money.

Previous to the passage of the resolution endorsing the bonds, two of the members of the special committee of the council, Messrs. Bullock and Oster, who had made the examination of the road, called upon me and demanded the sum of $3,000, declaring that unless this sum was paid to them the resolution authorizing the endorsement would not be passed. After it was passed they called again, and said that unless the money was paid the bonds would not be delivered to me, and that the money would not be paid to me unless this amount was paid to them. I was assured by them that there were seven members of the first branch and five in the second branch among whom this sum of $3,000 was to be divided.

Under these circumstances I invited the chief engineer of the company and two of the contractors to meet me privately, and I informed them that I believed there was an understanding between the members of the special committee of the council and Register Barnes. I told them of the demand made by the members of the council for $3,000, and that though the bonds were endorsed, the register would not deliver them. I also told them that he insisted on buying them himself whenever they should be issued, and would give but 85 for them, although they were selling for 90 at the stock board. [illegible] told them that if they could [illegible] make [illegible] amount sufficient to satisfy the demand of the members of the council that they had better return to their work. They replied that they could not return without the money; that they would be sold out if they returned without it; that they had for weeks been paying three or four dollars per day at the hotels, and they begged me to pay a portion of the amount to the council and get their money for them. After some deliberation it was determined to pay the members of the council $1,000. A check was drawn for this amount, and the following receipt was given and signed by Mr. Bullock, the chairman of the special committee.

"Received, March 13, 1868, of Henry Ettelle, one thousand dollars, for myself and others, for services rendered.

"$1,000. JAMES BULLOCK."

The receipt was drawn by the chief engineer of the company and paid by the contractors, and the parties receiving it regarded it as an installment on the $3,000, as they have since made demands for the balance of the money. As soon as the councilmen were paid their installment I received the other $20,000 from the register and paid the contractors their estimates. The money was paid willingly after the councilmen were satisfied; but the register only gave me 85 for this $20,000 also.

I then visited the register at his dwelling, and

H. Barnes, city register, twenty-two second mortgage bonds of the Western Maryland Railway Company, of one thousand dollars each, endorsed by the corporation of Baltimore, beginning with No. 146 and ending with 167, making in all $22,000. JOHN LEE CHAPMAN, President."

"Received, Baltimore, April 1st, 1868, of John H. Barnes, city register, twenty second mortgage bonds of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, of $1,000 each, with coupons attached, endorsed by the corporation of Baltimore, beginning with No. 168 and ending with No. 187—making in all $20,000.

"JOHN LEE CHAPMAN, President."

With the delivery of these bonds the register's official duties in respect thereto was ended. What he subsequently did in the way of finding purchasers for this large quantity of bonds was in his individual capacity as a citizen, and was no part of his office duties. The proceeds were delivered to Mr. Chapman, and the following receipts taken therefor:

"Received, March 11th, 1868, of Jno. H. Barnes, E. Pratt's check for twenty-one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars, in full for twenty five thousand dollars of the second mortgage bonds of the Western Maryland Railroad Company.

"JOHN LEE CHAPMAN, President."

"Received, March 11th, 1868, of Jno. H. Barnes, seventeen thousand dollars, in full for twenty thousand dollars second mortgage bonds Western Maryland Railroad, city guarantee.

"Received, Baltimore, April 1st, 1868, of Jno. H. Barnes, fifteen thousand, three hundred dollars, in full for eighteen second mortgage bonds of Western Maryland Railroad, of one thousand dollars each. JOHN LEE CHAPMAN, President."

S., 8; Demerara 2; Ireland 2; Holland 2; Port Spain, Trinidad 2; Bremen 1; Aspinwall 1; Marseilles 1; Liberia 1; Barcelona 1; and Stettin 1.—The principal articles carried out by these vessels were 29,398 bbls flour, 8,732 bbls and 225 puncheons corn meal, 24,198 bushels corn, 1,392 bbls oats, 1,140 bbls bran, 236 barrels peas, 961 bags rice, 1,307 barrels bread, 761 barrels potatoes, 951 barrels pork, 1,883 hogsheads tobacco, 392 hogsheads and 15 barrels tobacco stems, 3,659 lbs. manufactured tobacco, 407 bags bark, 511 tons coal, 1,470 bales cotton, 9,056 bbls. rosin, 491 cases canned goods, 4,673 reams paper, 2,702 sacks oil cake, 837 dozen brooms, 41,277 gallons benzine, 83,807 gallons lubricating oil, 15,294 gallons kerosene, 170,065 gallons petroleum, 11,727 gallons coal oil, 33 bales hay, 75,250 treenails, 85,896 staves, 617,552 feet lumber, 78,355 shooks and heads, 7,021 bundles hoops, 390,578 lbs. lard, 60,749 lbs. hams, 79,750 lbs. candles, 45,553 lbs. cheese, and 13,553 lbs. butter, besides the many smaller articles that go to make up West India cargoes. The total value of goods and merchandize shipped from Baltimore for foreign ports during the month of April amounted to $1,575,100, being largely in excess of those of any previous month for a lengthy period.

The receipts of produce from Southern ports during the month have been quite large. The receipts of cotton by water amounted to 4,073 bales, of which 1,976 came from Norfolk, 1,936 bales from Savannah, 741 from Charleston, 21 bales from Wilmington, N. C., and 49 bales from other North Carolina ports. Of naval stores the receipts were 4,225 bbls rosin, 1,136 bbls spirits of turpentine, and 1,114 bbls tar, and 5 bbls pitch from Wilmington, N. C., 174 bbls tar from other North Carolina ports; 2,371 bbls rosin, 224 bbls spirits turpentine, and 115 bbls tar from Norfolk, and 122 bbls rosin and 6 bbls spirits turpentine from Richmond. Of tobacco, the receipts were 422 hhds and 612 packages from Richmond, and 146 packages from Norfolk. Besides the above, the receipts of lumber, staves, heading, early vegetables, fish &c, have been quite heavy.

The City Council—The Vote on Expulsion in the First Branch.—There was no quorum in either branch of the city council on Saturday evening, and consequently no business was transacted. In the first branch there were but nine members in attendance. Messrs. Bullock, Charles and Oster, who were expelled on Friday night, (as was supposed,) were not present. The vote on the resolution of expulsion, it will be recollected, was fourteen for it and two against it, the three members concerned not voting, and one member being absent. Previous to the calling of the yeas and nays, the Chair stated that under the standing rules adopted by the branch its action was governed in all cases not specially provided for in said rules by the rules and practice of Congress. He then directed the clerk to read the constitutional provision on the subject governing the Congress of the United States, as follows: "Each house shall determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member," which provision in Congress has always been interpreted to mean two-thirds of the members voting. Acting upon this rule, the resolution of expulsion was thought to have been passed in the first branch. The Chair and other members, however, it appears, had overlooked a provision in the city charter, section 21, of article 4, of the public local law of Baltimore city, defining the powers of the respective branches of the city council, which says: "They may, with the concurrence of three-fourths of the whole, expel any member for disorderly behavior or malconduct in office." As the first branch consists of twenty members, three-fourths of the whole number of members elected would be fifteen, which is one vote more than was cast for the resolution of expulsion. The question may be raised whether the language of the law means "three-fourths of the whole" number of members present, or "three-fourths of the whole" number of members elected. What further action may be taken in the matter this evening has not transpired, and will depend upon the decision made by the branch in the case.

THE SUN.

BALTIMORE, MONDAY, MAY 4, 1868.

Reform for Farmington (VA.) Normal School.—The Board of Visitors met—resisted no" during the recess board over by virtue of his being a judge by—the high court of impeachment. The Board of Visitors met—resisted no" under the statutes) Barbee's capacity to sidering during his own constituted citizen, exile—the Board of Visitors met—resisted no" to the constitution to the title of the house. One of these was an amendment to the rules offered by Mr. Hamilton, of Harrison, to the effect that the Speaker be authorized to have, after, which the constitution requires to be this by a vote of two thirds of the house. The rules were then read by successive readings, and finally passed by unanimous consent. These, while the committee of Continual Johnson of their actions and misdemeanors necessarily, under the constitution, be tried by the senate, and cannot, under its organization, be tried by any one constituted a part of the judgment, as the Senate may determine. Mr. Hamilton, of Harrison, moved that a sworn majority of the senators competent to try him, the supreme penalty of disqualification.—

Mr. Hamilton, of Harrison, said that "high crimes and misdemeanors" are made out against the President, and he was not disposed to vote upon the articles of impeachment indiscriminately, but desired to have it known that two-thirds of the house of delegates have said he is guilty, by say so much, a bare majority only, of that, and he was not willing to vote for the conviction of the President of the United States, on so small a majority, without witness with the gravity of the occasion. He was not willing to vote for the impeachment proposition in the house, but, as it is believed by the above majority that he is guilty, he was willing to vote to submit the articles to judicial others, which must be the strength of that conviction in the minds of the people. He was not willing to vote for justice do not get over the two-thirds majority required by the constitution, and who do not, he thought, misunderstood that the judge to the portfolio! If then, even the president on the articles, he was not willing to vote for his removal from office.

Mr. Hamilton, of Harrison, said that the majority in custody, at the senate, any officers of the United States, and that the senate, by a vote of two-thirds, may remove them from office. In that trial it was the form of question put to each Senator by the presiding officer, "Is the accused guilty or not guilty of the charge as stated?" or guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor, as charged in the articles of impeachment? Or, have we discovered the element on the efficiency of which we can rely, and which will be found in the "high crimes and misdemeanors" of the articles, which will be sufficient to secure the senate without fear of error. Articles of impeachment, the trial here, proceeding—disenfranchising of the President, and the removal of the President, should be resisted, and he have appointed.

The Baltimore and Ohio Central Company.—To-day, except action upon the matter of reorganization, the stockholders of the company will be transacted. Of the business which the meeting is intended, when reports put in shape for the action of the meeting, we have no data here, the charges, the arraignment of the reports of the conditions and prospect of the company, and the action of the meeting, will be looked for with much curiosity and solicitude by the stockholders in house by the exclusion of those who have been in control of the affairs of the company, and the election of others to succeed them. We have examined the schemes which were offered for the reorganization of the company, and we have no doubt that the stockholders will be entirely satisfied with the provisions of the charter, whereof their choice. Action is to be taken by the stockholders, therefore—disenfranchising of the President, and the removal of the President, should be resisted, and he have appointed.

Accused Election Judges on the Stump.—It will be seen below report of yesterday's proceedings in the senate, that the articles of impeachment had another meeting yesterday, and were received. It took place between Mr. Bromley, of Anne Arundel, and Mr. Barbee, of Fauquier, two radical members of the late war of a private

BALTIMORE, MONDAY, MAY 6, 1861.

Fortieth Congress—Second Session

(Reported Expressly for the Sun.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.

The Senate took up the House bill to provide for the collection of duties on imports, and for other purposes.

Mr. Johnson, of Maine, was entertained by the Senate for an hour and a half this morning, in a speech in favor of the passage of a resolution of censure on the part of the Senate.

Mr. Johnson's resolution was then passed.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Pelton introduced a resolution, which was adopted, requesting of the Secretary of War information in relation to the number of troops now in the service of the United States.

Mr. Pelton introduced a bill to amend the Judiciary Act.

When the members returned from the recess, Mr. Pelton's bill was taken up. Mr. Pelton said that the bill proposed to amend the Judiciary Act of 1789, by extending the jurisdiction of the United States Courts to cases arising under the laws of the United States. He had, he said, introduced the bill at the request of the Attorney General, and had referred it to the committee of the whole House on the state of the Union, because it involved a question of jurisdiction. He did not believe that the bill would be found to be open to objection. It was, he said, a measure of justice. The Attorney General had informed him that there were many cases pending in the Courts of the United States, which involved questions arising under the laws of the United States, and that the Courts had no jurisdiction of them. He did not wish to occupy the time of the House in discussing the bill, but would merely say that it was a measure of justice, and that he hoped it would be passed.

Mr. Vallandigham said that he had not yet examined the bill, but from the statement of the gentleman from Illinois, he was inclined to think that it was a proper measure. He presumed that the bill was intended to meet the case of the prosecutions against the members of the Legislature of Maryland, and the Police Commissioners of Baltimore, for the arrest of Mr. Merryman, and other cases of that kind. He presumed that the bill would not have been introduced unless it was intended to meet such cases.

Mr. Pelton said that the bill was not intended to meet any particular case. It was intended to meet cases generally.

Mr. Vallandigham said that he presumed that the bill would meet the case of Mr. Merryman, and other cases of that kind. He thought that the bill was a proper measure, and that it would be passed.

Mr. Dunnell, of Minnesota, said that he had not examined the bill, but he presumed that it was intended to meet the case of Mr. Merryman, and other cases of that kind. He thought that the bill was a proper measure, and that it would be passed.

Mr. Pelton, in reply to objection, Mr. Dunnell said, I think the House may consider the bill at once. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Crittenden] will, I presume, be here to-morrow, and he will be able to state whether the bill meets the case of Mr. Merryman or not. I am not aware that it does. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Vallandigham] has stated that he presumed that the bill was intended to meet the case of Mr. Merryman, and other cases of that kind. I have not examined the bill, and I do not know whether it does or not. I am not aware that it does. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Dunnell] has stated that he presumed that the bill was intended to meet the case of Mr. Merryman, and other cases of that kind. I have not examined the bill, and I do not know whether it does or not. I am not aware that it does.
